

babystart™ conception pack

This home conception pack provides the opportunity for both the man and woman to screen their fertility potential at home. For the majority of couples it will improve the chances of early conception because it gives clear advice on how to optimise the timing of intercourse each month.

What does the pack contain?

First..... Ovulation predictor tests for the woman.

Five test sticks for the detection of the ovulation hormone (LH) surge in urine which is an indication that ovulation will occur within the next 24-36 hrs. This test provides really excellent early warning of ovulation and a positive result indicates the best time to have intercourse.

Second... A fertility test for the man.

One test kit, sufficient for two sperm concentration tests. A positive result indicates that the sperm concentration is 20 million/mL or more which is the concentration used by the World Health Organisation to determine a mans fertility status. At least 40% of infertility problems are attributed to the man so it is good that couples can now have a chance to screen for a low sperm count!

Finally... instructions on the timing of intercourse...

Research clearly shows that planning the timing of intercourse each cycle will improve the chances of conception.

The babystart™ conception pack will screen the man and woman for fertility and also help couples to have intercourse when they are both at their most fertile.
