

babystart™ male infertility test

A screening test for low sperm count in men

Did you know you need 20 million sperm per mL to be considered fertile ?

The World Health Organisation has defined a mans fertility on the basis of this concentration of sperm in semen. The babystart™ male infertility kit is a unique home test that will tell you if a mans sperm concentration is greater or less than 20 million per mL.

A positive result is going to be good news although its not proof of fertility. A negative result suggests you should see your doctor which is not all bad news because it does at least save you months of futile trying to have a baby.

The babystart™ home diagnostic screening test is a rapid test of sperm concentration in semen. The kit contains two tests and if both test results are neagive it is an indicator of male infertility.

The babystart™ male infertility test will allow you to test your fertility potential, privately and discreetly in your own home.
